Talk shop with military veterans; see how your experience fits the industry

This gear served your country

This gear can serve your community

The energy industry offers veterans a path from military service to community service and a rewarding job.

Why You

Veterans have the skills, training and commitment for many frontline technical, engineering and support jobs in the utility industry. The values of pride, duty, teamwork and safety acquired in the military readily fit the industry's culture and mission.

Veterans are creative problem-solvers, collaborative contributors, and disciplined responders.

Why AEP

- Industry-competitive salaries and benefits
- Training and education for credentials and degrees
- AEP's service territory—Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico—offers career opportunities in 11 states
- As baby boomers retire, AEP needs new talent for infrastructure renewal, new construction and technological improvements
- Our military veterans' employee resource group provides a military-friendly workplace and serves as a social, career and support network.
